It was a trip I'll never forget. It started on 27 June 2013 at 7am. when my dad woke me up shouting: "Today is the day!"

- What day? - I asked.

- The day when the journey begins, you'd better get ready.

- What journey? - I was still confused.

lex. But he left, being ignorant to my question. 54

gr-gr So, two hours later my whole family and I were in the car ready to depart. The situation remained bizarre for me because my parents have never mentioned this trip before. As they told me later, it was a spontaneous decision to even for them. Anyway, we all expected to get a bewildering experience. And we did.

We spent two weeks, two challenging weeks full of sun heat and mosquitos, travelling around country. We saw flourishing fields, and the marble of water in countless lakes, stopped by a couple of national parks, spent nights in local hostels and drove about 400 miles a day.

200 I took a plethora of pictures of steep mountains, plain lawns and endless forests but there is only one ¹⁷⁶ picture of me and my parents together. If you looked at this photograph, you would say: "You don't look alike at all." That's, actually, true. My mum is blonde haired, slim and pale. However, I was plumpy and scurly back then. But we both look seem equally delighted in the picture and that is the most precious thing about it.

I wish I could stay in those days forever!
