Making a Difference: a little water at a time.

Did you know that one person dies every 15 seconds of a water-related disease or that about one billion people in the world live without access to clean, safe drinking water? Scott Harrison didn't. About 8 years ago, Scott was living in a fancy flat in New York City and driving an expensive car. He had a great job promoting nightclubs and events. Life was easy and fun for Scott, yet he felt very empty inside because his life had no real purpose. So he decided to do something about it. Scott volunteered on a floating hospital with an organization called Mercy Ships, which offers free medical care to the world's poorest countries. Doctors and other technical staff from around the world leave their jobs and work for free helping thousands of people who need medical care. Scott went to Liberia, Africa. He took the position of photojournalist. What Scott saw there changed his life. He was shocked to see thousands and thousands of people waiting in a queue every day for medical attention. Some of them had very serious medical problems. What Scott realized in his two years of service with Mercy Ships was that about 80% of all the diseases they encountered were due to unsafe water and poor sanitation.

Scott returned to New York City with a mission: he would form a charity to provide clean water in poor countries. Scott founded "charity: water" on the night of his 31st birthday. He threw a huge party. Instead of gifts, he asked his guests to donate money to his new charity. He raised 15,000 dollars that night, which went to fixing and building wells in Uganda. Scott used his natural talent for promoting things to turn "charity: water" into a very successful humanitarian organization. Since its beginning "charity: water" has provided 1.5 million people with clean water, with 3,200 projects in 17 countries. Scott's plans don't stop here. The organization's goal is to bring clean water to 100 million people by 2020. Why do all this? "Guilt has never been part of it," according to Scott. "It's the excitement, instead, presenting people with an opportunity - you have an amazing chance to build a well!"

7. Mercy Ships is a charity hospital in Liberia, Africa.
8. Doctors and staff don't get paid on Mercy Ships.
9. Scott volunteered as a doctor on a floating hospital.

12. 17 million people now receive clean water from Scott's charity.

What Are You Doing This Summer?

Ready, set, action! Get ready for an experience of a lifetime with the Holiday Movie Company. We are not a film school, nor do we offer qualifications in film production. What we do offer, however, is a unique filmmaking holiday in a beautiful location with experienced filmmakers.

Our holidays are aimed at beginners who want to learn about filmmaking. Our guests come together to make a short film over a period of two weeks. Guests choose what position in the film production team they are interested in. Positions in areas such as lighting, sound and costume design are available. All guests will have the opportunity to direct a part of the film and work with professional actors. The film crew will have a screenplay to follow, however, all decisions in the filming are under the control of the director and crew. Our role as a company is simply to help and advice each guest. Guests must make their own travel arrangements to the holiday movie company. Once there, we provide hotel accommodation, all necessary equipment and transport to and from the different shooting locations. Before production starts, we will demonstrate how to use the equipment and train guests for their positions in the film project. At the end of the training, the guests will get together with the actors and produce a small part of the film as a test piece. Once filming begins, there will be a daily filming schedule. Some days might be longer than others due to weather and filming problems. Of course, there will be time off for sightseeing and relaxation. We want our guests to have lots of fun in a new place, meet like-minded people, learn new skills and have an unforgettable experience making a film. Our guests not only leave with pictures of what they did on holiday, but with a professional film to show their friends back home.
