Sp Tymen 2070 - almost utopia.

As the time passes, everything slowly changes: trends fade in and out, people become different, the progress just keeps moving forward. This includes cities as well, which changed beyond recognition in the last 50 years.

Sp \triangleright Modern Tymen looks totally like before.

When the government started to care about architecture and human living conditions, many towns changed for the better. New ideas and progressive projects made Tymen more comfortable for both older and younger generations.

\triangleright Technological advancements.

Sp One of the most controversial decisions was banning many everyday items, such as plastic bags, which led to pollution. For example, oil-powered cars became obsolete, electric vehicles became a new, cheaper trend.

\triangleright Current society - too comfortable?

Sp People, despite comfortable conditions, still prefer staying inside, rather than outside. It even affected ~~the~~ the workforce - men and women prefer being a software developer, rather than, for example, a more social and outgoing job.

GR Elderly generation started to worry about the future, as their kids barely leave home, enjoying their free-time playing in virtual reality. That doesn't mean that the world is coming to an end - I think that we are just in the middle of process of evolving into something completely new as humanity. I can confidently say that Tymen is about to be one of the greatest cities in Russia.
